On Sale

The experience of being a traditional art practitioner in the past motivates me to raise the questions on the issue of commercializing. To combine traditional art element with money is a comment on our society how traditional painting loses its original value and becomes a commodity.

The traditional paintings created for religious purposes or for enlightenment, temple education, meditation in the past. These traditional paintings are a daily practice to extend our knowledge and to search for truth within the self through contemplation and disciplines. But in present conditions, without following its rituals, it is created as commodities, market product, decorations or fashion. Thus, my attempt to express losing its original value and the money-centered reality.
